

Wolverhampton model of care (Integrated care pathway)

Historically Wolverhampton was one of the first districts to develop primary care led diabetes services and demonstrate that primary care could deliver a quality of care equivalent to a traditional secondary care service.

The Wolverhampton model of integrated diabetes care is based on self-care through education, patient centeredness and empowerment.

The emphasis is to deliver an increasing proportion of health care in primary care. Specialist care is delivered in partnership with primary care according to the clinical needs of the patient, and as close to the community as possible.
